

Acknowledgements

My thanks to

My study programme supervisor Professor Jean McNiff and my supervisory team, Professor Norah Jones and Professor David Turner, for providing the opportunity, ongoing support and positive encouragement over the past years;

University of Glamorgan for the innovative approach to doctoral studies that makes this type of collaborative study possible;

Members of NCVA Action Learning groups;

Participants in the Setanta Project, Comenius Project, North/South Schools Link, LCA team and students, DCU School of Computer Applications and DCU School of Education Studies;

My wife, Clare, for her continuous support and advice throughout this research;

My parents, Kathleen and the late Tony O'Neill, for the sacrifices that have made all my education possible.

This is a piece of collaborative research in the broadest possible sense and part of it is owned by all those mentioned and many others. My thanks to you all and especially those who joined me in the 'swamp' of research and practice:

Adrienne Webb, Aiser Ibrahim, Aisling Brennan, Alan Sherlock, Alice McCormack, Andrew Donlon, Andrina Wafer, Anne Furey, Anne O'Driscoll, Annmarie Dunne, Anthony Fitzgerald, Barbara Kelly, Carmel Reilly, Chris Glavey, Christopher Sheridan, Corina Doherty, Cynthia Deane, Daniel Butler, David Kearney, Dean Kearns, Deirdre Pentony, Deirdre McQuade, Denis O'Mahoney, Dutch Inspectorate of Education, Elaine O'Connell, Gay Luskin, Geraldine Ruane, Gerry Cashel, Gerry Coffey, Grainne Cullen, Greg Fitzpatrick, Jimmy Reynolds, John Donlon, Karl Clifford, Keith Fallon, Keith Sammon, Keith Winnick, Ken Maher, Kevin Slattery, Kris Bridges, Luana Macananey, Mairéad Morley, Margaret Farren, Mary Brannigan, Marie Mooney, Matthew Reilly, Michael Dundon, Michelle Hynes, Milo Connolly, Monica Mahon, Niall McCarthy, Pat Hastings, Patricia Magee, Peter McGonigle, Ray Walshe, Raymond Dunne, Richard Keane, Ronan Cotter, Ronan Fahy, Seamus Knox, Sonya Kinch, Stan McHugh, Stephen Reid.